Creating an image or brand

- This is about associating the product in people's minds with the kind of image the company wants to portray
- For instance, if promoting a healthy or sporty lifestyle brand this will be reflected in the image.
- The goal is to attract the correct target market and to think positively about the product or service

Business Profile

How the business describes itself to visitors

Advertising Promoting Products and Services

- Businesses can set up free profiles on social media platforms

- They use them to promote their products and services and describe their businesses to customers

- They will post interesting content that their followers interact with by commenting, liking or sharing

Advertising
Paid for adverts (Sponsored)

- Social media platforms earn their money by offering businesses paid advertising

- Facebook - sponsored adverts that users see on their timeline/newsfeed

- On Twitter – paid for tweets - promoted tweets that appear in your feed among the tweets from people you follow

- Adverts are tailored to particular demographic criteria (age or gender), and to the user's recent internet search history

Paid for adverts (Sponsored)
Using Social media to advertise (sponsored)

- Question – look on your social media newsfeed. What adverts are appearing?

Advertising Direct and Indirect Advertising

Direct Advertising

- Where business uses adverts which tell you to buy their product or sign up to their service
- Direct approach – simply telling you what that product or service is in the hope you will purchase

Indirect Advertising

- More subtle approach
- Not directly selling through that particular post, but posting content that would be of interest to the target audience
- For instance – posting content to related issues - perhaps a sportswear supplier showing a video clip of a recent sporting event
- Sponsorship – e.g. sponsoring a TV programme
- Creates a positive attitude towards the product or service

Advertising
Using the Customer's search history

- Businesses will pay to have adverts placed on a social media user's site (newsfeed/twitter feed).

- It will display products or services that a customer (or potential customer) has previously searched for on that business's website. The advert will provide a link back to the website from the advert

- The aim is to remind users of items they have looked at but not yet purchased

- It is using a user's previous site search history to target adverts

How ads follow you around the internet

How ads follow you around the internet

- Question – search for a product on the internet, and then go to one of your social media sites. Is that product appearing as an advertisement?

Content Formats

- Text alone is not very eye-catching – and you must proof read an check grammar!

- Where possible, including images will help to make a post more noticeable – but use good quality images

- Video is very popular but producing good quality video is time consuming.

- Poor quality images or video will damage the company image.

- Appropriate links to further enhance the user experience – especially to company website

- Facebook provides a number of apps including polls and quizzes – encourages participation

Types of Post

- Information
- Promotion
- Humour
- Special offers

Mobile Device Integration

- Most social media platforms have mobile versions of their sites – e.g. optimised for smaller screens so that people can use them on the move

- Allows users to locate local services while they are on the move so mobile device integration is very important to businesses (e.g. if you are out you might want to search for a nearby restaurant or coffee shop)

- Location services are important for this – location related information
